MY PRAYER

BID SUBJECTIVE SPIRIT CARRY MESSAGE TO THE BATTLE-FIELDS OF FRANCE

By F. Lee Chauvan

The psychic writers tell us that we have two minds: the subjective, which is the spirit, and the objective, its guide of reason. The subjective, or spirit, never sleeps, it recognizes neither time nor space, and can be directed by the will of its objective to perform a certain service during the night hours, just before that mind rests in sleep, or is quiescent. Now, tonight, when my eyes are slowly closing, I will say to my subjective: "Spirit within me, I am too weak in material years to stand in the front line of duty, but in you is an eternity of strength. Do not, tonight, in idle dreams, chase the phantoms of dead thoughts, but when you see in my face the rest of the night from the tire of the day, go to the battlefields of France, where the flag with its stripes of red and stars in a field of blue is held aloft, and then with all of the power of your God-given love, flash into the spirits of its long line of defenders—defenders of the world's liberty—the heart-stir of the words, "Look at the flag, see, how beautiful it is!" In you is a voice greater than the syllable articulate; great, in its call to action, as the trumpet notes of the archangel. You come from God, who is your home. The men will hear you and feel you in the most secret recesses of their natures. Flash again and again, "Look at the flag, see, how beautiful it is!" and then the beauty of the flag will become the beauty of the soldiers' souls. In the glitter of their bayonets will be the smile of the Most High and, like Lucifer, the Imperial Monster will be as a "carcass trodden under feet." When my eyes open in the morning, in them will be the light of victory.

THE SERVICE CLUB

Members of the Service Club now number about thirty-five. At a recent meeting the girls elected Miss Violet Turner president, and at the next business meeting it is probable that an executive committee will be appointed for the transaction of any business which may arise.

At their meeting Tuesday evening at Red Cross headquarters there was great enthusiasm. The girls worked in the Hospital Garment Section under Mrs. Helen Sadler in the manufacture of bed socks, for which the Chapter has received a big allotment.

Mrs. W. W. Ramsay, president of the Tuesday Afternoon Club, addressed the girls about nine o'clock and asked for their help in the coming Harvest Festival, to be given in September by the Tuesday Club for the benefit of the Red Cross.

MRS. TUFT LEAVING

Mrs. Eva Tuft of 1421 Burchett street, who organized the surgical dressings department of the Glendale Chapter of the Red Cross, and who has been one of the bulwarks of the organization who could be depended upon in every spot and place, is giving up her work here and will leave with her son and daughter, Dorothy and Norman, for St. Helena the latter part of the week. She is placing her children in school there for special training leading up to the medical course which her daughter is planning to take. As for Mrs. Tuft herself, she is so tired from her strenuous work that she feels like the old woman

"Who always was tired
For she lived in a house where help wasn't hired."

When this old woman was about to die she exhorted her friends:

"Mourn for me never
For I'm going to do nothing forever and ever."

We know Mrs. Tuft is too great a worker to ever do that, but she does plan to rest for a while. She has leased her home here for a year to Mr. and Mrs. Masak of West Windsor road (9th street) and says she is coming back to take possession when it is again vacant.

She will be greatly missed in the local Red Cross Chapter but she has carefully trained able assistants who are now perfectly able to carry on the work of the Surgical Dressings Department.

NORMA LORAINE BURSON

Norma Loraine is the name of a bright-eyed, black-haired little daughter who was welcomed last Saturday evening, August 10th, 1918, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burson and son Robert of 771 South Louise street.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

RED CROSS BENEFIT TO BE HELD ON HIGH SCHOOL GROUNDS

Mrs. W. W. Ramsay, President of the Tuesday Afternoon Club reports that the Harvest Festival which the club is planning to put on in September for the benefit of the local Red Cross Chapter, is coming along very satisfactorily, although only an outline of the affair has been arranged as yet. Dr. C. W. Bachman of 303 West Ninth street, who has had great experience as a director of moving pictures and writer of scenarios, will have charge of the dramatic part of the entertainment, Spencer Robinson will look after the choral work, Mrs. Pearl Keller will superintend the dancing. It is expected that at least one hundred people, big and little, will take part.

It will be in the nature of a "Spectacle," symbolic of the sowing, cultivating and reaping of the grain and promises to be exceedingly pretty. There will be a good deal of feature work, such as songs and dances.

The committee has been fortunate in securing the use of the High School grounds and the pageant will take place on the athletic field. A supper will be served in the school cafeteria, and a "Jester's Court" which will provide a carnival of fun, will be established in one of the buildings. There will also be a Gipsy camp and fortune tellers.

Of course there will be booths where a great variety of things will be sold, such as pop corn, candy, and other goodies to eat, aprons, both fancy and useful, and many other things tempting to patrons. It will be held for two nights and will open about 4 p. m. when a matched tennis game will be played on the school court.

As it will take place under the harvest moon, it will be a very nice time for patrons to drive in from the surrounding country to enjoy it. While the members of the Tuesday Club are moving in the matter, they regard it as a community affair and are soliciting help from everybody in rolling up a fund for the Red Cross.

LIBRARY NOTES

The little folks of Glendale had another story hour Tuesday morning at the Library at 9 o'clock. It was another patriotic session and Miss Alice Frank was their entertainer. She held their interest closely and told them some beautiful little tales, at the close giving them flag souvenirs. They sang some patriotic songs and were allowed to look at the collection of pictures which Mrs. Danford and her assistants are accumulating for the special use of the schools and which will have special reference to nature study, sloyd work, etc. Some of the pictures have been taken from magazines, some have been purchased from the Perry Company. Miss Lillian Schick, who is taking a kindergarten course, assisted with the instruction given the children in the use of the library. The next story hour will probably be devoted to Nature Study.

Miss Lucile Parker, who is interested in food conservation, has placed in the library for reference, some valuable recipes which call for the use of corn meal and other wheat substitutes.

Books are coming in quietly but steadily for the libraries at the cantonments, and a consignment will soon be ready to go forward from Glendale.

Miss Laura E. Roberts, first assistant librarian, is spending her vacation with her mother at Hermosa Beach. She is expected back next Monday, when Mrs. Danford will have a two weeks' outing. She has not decided just what she will do with the time except that she will make some visits to other libraries to see what she can pick up in the way of new ideas.

AFTERNOON TEA

Tuesday afternoon the Higher Guild of St. Mark's Church enjoyed afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. Le Roy Bosserman, at 814 South Central avenue. About eighteen ladies were present. An informal musical program was given which included piano selections by Miss Ina Whitaker, Miss Gertrude Champlain, Mrs. Pearson and the hostess. Six members of the choir sang Kipling's "Recessional." A silver offering was taken for the benefit of the Guild.

NOTICE TO HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

31 AMERICAN DIVISIONS IN FRANCE

THIRTY-THIRD DIVISION PARTICIPATING IN PICARDY BATTLE GEN. MARCH TELLS NEWSPAPER MEN

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

WASHINGTON, August 14.—Chief of Staff General March told the weekly conference of newspaper men today that it was the 131st Regiment of the 33rd division that co-operated with the British in Picardy. The British highly commended the gallentry of the Americans.

Gen. March said that thirty-one complete American divisions are now in France, each division totalling between 40,000 and 45,000 men. This makes nearly 1,400,000 men now in France.

He declared the Picardy salient has been reduced on a 53-mile front to a depth of 14 miles.

The nearest point the Germans now approach to Paris is 50 miles away.

The Germans are now back on the line they held in the winter of 1916 in the Santerre region. The fact that they are occupying their old trenches accounts for their stiffer resistance. At some points elsewhere the 1916 line has not been reached.

PICARDY BATTLE SLOWS DOWN

INFANTRY ACTION NEARLY AT STANDSTILL—BRITISH ADVANCE LINES AND TAKE PRISONERS

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, August 14.—The war office announced this morning that in the last 24 hours infantry action has been nearly at a standstill on the Picardy front. East of Vieux, Berquin and east of Meteren the British have advanced their lines taking prisoners and guns. Local German attacks in the Dickebush sector were repulsed.

The Paris statement detailed chiefly artillery activity along the thirty mile front between the Avre and the Oise.

ON SEA AND LAND

EXPERIENCES OF GEO. DRINKWATER ON SHIPBOARD AND IN CAMP

The following interesting letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Drinkwater of 1106 Lomita avenue, from their son George, who is with Company C., 53d Ammunition Train, Coast Artillery Corps, the same company to which Ellsworth Heald belongs, and the two young men are very intimate. Both are in the truck school of the "Train" and taking drills of one sort or another.

"Somewhere in France,"
July 16th, 1918.

Dear Mother, Father and Sister:

This is the third time I've started to write to you but something has always seemed to prevent my finishing it. I've nearly forgotten how to write. I have received several letters from you and you may be sure they were joyfully received, here in "sunny France." I have read them over and over. They were about a month in reaching me, but were all the dearer for it. No doubt there are many letters somewhere on the way.

I stood the sea voyage fine and suffered only a few hours from seasickness. The sea was comparatively calm all the way and we didn't sight a single "U-boat"—we were too well protected for that and would have given the "Dutchmen" a very warm reception. We had an uneventful trip all the way. I was on "lookout" duty coming over. We shared this duty with the ship's crew. We were stationed way up in a little cabin above the bridge. Each of us was assigned a certain arc or sector and had to scan every inch of the sea or horizon in that sector and report every suspicious object we saw. We were each provided with a pair of binoculars. I was on duty four hours in half-hour shifts and off eight; from 8 a. m. until noon, and from 8 p. m. until midnight. It was very interesting and each of us who first sighted a suspicious object was awarded a prize—from $1 to $25 according to the importance of the object sighted.

We were billeted in an old chateau for about two weeks, but are now in old French barracks in one of the oldest cities in France. There is a large hospital near us and we fraternize with the wounded French soldiers.

The climate here is ideal, it being much the same as at home. We are well fed and I never felt better in my life.

The work we are now engaged in, intensive training in special work, is very interesting and I am learning something that will be useful to me in civil life, provided I care to take up that occupation. We are kept busy from Reveille to Retreat.

We are given passes from 5:30 p. m. to 8:50 p. m. through the week and all day on Sundays, thereby having an opportunity to visit in the city. I have already met some very nice French people through their soldier sons and am invited to dine at one of their homes tomorrow.

A week ago this Sunday, July 14th, the French nation celebrated "the fall of the Bastille," an interesting account of which I am enclosing. Our battalion took part in a parade through the city in conjunction with French troops and were reviewed by a high French officer.

The streets here are very narrow and the houses, which are all of stone, are built very close together. The quaint little shops are very picturesque and as soon as possible I am going to send you some souvenirs.

Ellsworth and I were down town together night before last and he had some pictures taken to send home. They cost him ten francs a dozen (about $1.80). They are very good and I intend to have some taken on pay-day to send home.

I can't speak French, as yet, but expect soon to "parley-voo" like a native. I can already make many of my wants known without the aid of a dictionary. My Latin helps me a great deal and I picked up considerable French when I stayed at Ferchauds.

We are a long way from the front at present and probably won't reach there for some time as our special training will take some time yet.

I see by the papers that the Germans are being severely punished and that their long-heralded "drive" was a failure. If you could see the thousands of troops on their way to the front, you would realize as I do, that the war can't last much longer, and that the Boche will be driven back across the Rhine, and then I can come home to you, Mother dear.

I can't write a very interesting letter as you know the censorship is very rigid and we must not write anything that would aid the enemy.

They have a very interesting paper published especially for us called "The Stars and Stripes," also European editions of several New York and London papers, so you see we are kept in touch with the rest of the world. I am going to subscribe for the "Stars and Stripes" and will mail it to you each week.

Well, dear ones, I have to close this brief letter, as "duty calls." I shall write as often and as much as possible and tell you as much of our experiences as possible. Above all, don't worry about me, as I am well cared for and will be with you again before many months and I want you to be the same as when I left.

With all my love,
Your son and brother,
GEORGE,

Co. C. 53d A. T. C. A. C. American Expeditionary Force, via New York.

NEW GYMNASIUM

ADDITION TO THE UNION HIGH SCHOOL GROUP TO BE COMPLETED SOON

Glendale Union High School will have a beautiful gymnasium. This does not mean that it will be expensive or fine architecturally, but rather that it will be ideal for gymnasium purposes. Kent & Son have the contract and their workmen are pushing it very satisfactorily and say it will be ready for use when school opens.

It is the shape of a big bungalow with broad, sloping roof which will be covered with tar paper, and the walls are girdled with casement windows which will insure the maximum of light and air. The total ground floor dimensions are 64x90 feet and at the east end about 20 feet have been reserved for an office and supply room, for shower baths, lockers, lavatories, etc. These will be low rooms and above will be a sort of balcony overlooking the main gymnasium floor which would be quite ideal as a loft for chorus or orchestra. The main gymnasium floor, which will be 64x70 feet, will be floored in the center with maple, bordered with pine.

The foreman in charge of the work says it has been visited by several parties of school officials who say it is the best arranged gymnasium in this part of Southern California. It is certain to be very useful to the High School.

MONTAVILLE FLOWERS

Montaville Flowers, candidate for Congress from the Ninth Congressional district, will open his political campaign proper this, Wednesday, evening in Krobel Hall, Boyle Heights, at First and State streets.

Mr. Flowers promises to prove that of eight important war measures presented to Congress at the behest of President Wilson, Randall voted against all but one. Mr. Flowers also promises to prove that remarks made by Randall on the floor of Congress show his attitude against the war, and Mr. Flowers believes the gentleman is not a safe man to return to Congress. Mr. Flowers is slated to speak in Glendale Tuesday, August 20, at which time he will likely stand ready to repeat in substance the address he will deliver at Boyle Heights tonight. Every citizen in the Ninth District should acquaint himself with the qualifications of the various candidates for Congress.

ESQUIRE FANSET PROMOTED

An important transaction at the regular meeting of the Elks' Lodge Monday evening was the election of Esquire John Fanset to the office of Esteemed Lecturing Knight, left vacant by the resignation of A. L. Weaver, who goes east to do war work. Mr. Fanset is a charter member of the Lodge and ranks very high in the fraternal, business and social life of Glendale. His appointment gives universal satisfaction. At the next meeting of the Lodge Exalted Ruler Woodard will make an appointment to fill the office of Esquire.

STUDENTS' ARMY TRAINING CORPS PLAN

Preliminary announcement was made at the University of California today of the new Students' Army Training Corps plan of the War Department. The government through its committee on Student's War Service of the American Council of Education will conduct "Go-To-College" campaigns in every state in the union, the purpose being to stimulate enrollment in colleges and universities in order to provide for the War Department great numbers of college trained men as officer material.

The "Go-To-College campaign in California will be under the direction of C. E. Rugh, Professor of Education in the state university. A survey will be made of all of the graduates of the high schools of the state for the last two years and an attempt will be made to interest many hundreds of prospective students with President's Wilson's new plan for the training of officers.

The status of a student enlisted in the Students' Army Training Corps and his relation to the draft is explained in the following statement issued by the Committee on Students' War Service of the American Council of Education with the authority of the War Department:

"A student enlisted in the Students' Army Training Corps is in the military service of the United States. Because he does not receive pay, he is classed as on inactive service, but in a national emergency the President may call him at any time to active service. He is called to active service each summer when he attends camp for six weeks and receives the pay of a private.

"His relation to the draft is a follows: Any student so enlisted, though in the military service of the United States, is technically on inactive duty, and therefore must register after he has reached draft age and upon notice by the President. Upon stating on his questionnaire that he is already in the military service of the United States, he will be placed automatically by his local Draft Board in Class-V-D, as provided by the Selective Service regulations. The Draft Board will not call him for induction so long as he remains a member of the Students' Army Training Corps.

"In order that the college student may not even appear to enjoy special privileges, it is agreed, however, that when the day arrives on which according to his order number he would have been drafted, had he not already volunteered, the fact is reported to the President of the college, and to the Commanding Officer at the college, who in turn reports it to the Adjutant General. This is the day of reckoning for the college man. The President of the college and the Commanding Officer will then report to the Chairman of the Committee on Education and Special Training of the War Department, for what form of military service the individual is in their judgment best qualified. They will recommend either that the student should continue his studies to prepare for work in medicine, engineering, chemistry, psychology, economies, etc., or that he should go at once to an Officers' Training Camp to prepare for an officers commission in the infantry, artillery, etc., or that he should be assigned to work in the ordnance, quartermaster or other Staff Corps or sent immediately to a division at one of the camps. Lieut. Col. Rees, commander of the entire Students' Corps, has authority to dispose of his men in the way best suited to meet the emergencies of the military and national situation at the time. The presumption is that, for the next year, the largest proportion of the student body reaching twenty-one years will be required to supply a large portion of the officers needed for the national army. It is understood that at least four or five times as many officers will be required as the total number of students who will graduate from all American colleges and universities. Enlistment in the Students' Army Training Corps, therefore, while it does not hold out any promise of an officer's commission, is at the present time the plain road leading in that direction.

"The student who shows no ability for special service in his college and military work, will be ordered into active service as a private when his day of reckoning comes. Enlistment is for the duration of the war. If, however, the student fails to improve his college opportunities, he may be dismissed from college by action of the college authorities and discharged from the military service by the military authorities. He would then be subject to the operation of the draft. His enlistment may be cancelled for other sufficient causes, such as sickness, lack of funds, etc., upon recommendation of the President of the college and the military officer in command at the college.

"Opportunity will be given for the enlisted student, who so elects, to transfer from army to navy, and vice versa, and to be assigned to active service in one of the various corps of the army upon recommendation of the college president and the proper military authority.

"Regular uniforms, including hats, shoes, and overcoats, will be furnished all members of the Students' Army Training Corps by the government.

"Should Congress lower the age liability to immediate military service, men of the new ages not already enlisted may find difficulty in entering the service otherwise than through the Draft Boards. In view of this possibility, all men expecting to enlist at all in the Students' Army Training Corps would do well to enter promptly."

NO COMPROMISE

Nothing can be gained now by discussing peace terms. Germany is still arrogant and insolent. Her rulers have not grasped the spirit of the war on autocracy. They won't see it. They will have to feel it. It will have to be shot into them by allied guns.

The allies have accepted America's unselfish war aims as announced by President Wilson. His Fourth of July address to the world at Washington's tomb expresses the spirit of America. There can be no compromise between that spirit and Prussianism. They are as far apart as the poles. Diplomats can't sit around a table and shake diplomatic dice for world stakes.

All the world knows what we are fighting for. The war must go on until we have won all that we are fighting for, which in essence is the right of all the people everywhere on earth to the right of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, unmolested, by any two-legged men who claim to rule their fellows by divine right.

Until the German kaiser understands that, until it is pounded into him and all his family and all his associates and all other autocrats everywhere, nothing can be gained by discussing terms of peace. On with the war! Kaiserism must be eternally and everlastingly licked.

FOOD LESSONS IN DEPARTMENT STORES

Department stores in many of the large cities have called on home demonstration agents to assist them in giving instruction in food conservation to their customers and employes. In some stores special rooms have been equipped where demonstrations are given and literature distributed. Attractive booths have been set in the aisles of others where exhibits of war cooking are shown and recipes are given out. The agents have worked with the window decorators in planning window exhibits. In many places wheat substitutes have been featured in demonstrations, and each purchaser has been supplied with recipes and instructions for using them. Classes for employees after hours have been arranged. In some cities the agent meets these groups regularly every week.

DRESSMAKING SERVICE DEPARTMENT

The Dressmaking Service Department of the Red Cross is proving a great success. It is hailed with enthusiasm by home dressmakers who need help and advice. Three jobs came in Tuesday, and there were several inquirers who will be there with their materials next Tuesday. One patron had a skirt which did not hang right. The defect was corrected and she went home happy. Another got assistance in the making and fitting of a nifty sleeveless jacket, and she too beamed over the results. It will prove a boon to many women for Mrs. Waite, who is at the head of the department, is experienced and professional. She knows how and has ideas.

French children are picking up English rapidly since American soldiers reached France but they are acquiring slang phrases first, according to Y. M. C. A. War Worker secretaries. One day an American Major was walking through a village street when a little girl, not more than four, stepped in front of him, saluted and said in the sweetest childish voice: "Hello, kid!" Everywhere the children wave and say goodbye when they see an American. To them it means, "How do you do?" But the climax was reached when a five-year old boy that is the pet of the American troops was stopped by the General of the division. The boy listened to the kindly words of the General and said: "Good bye; go chase yourself."

Stine, and her sisters, Rose Stine and Mrs. Beulah Smith, of 333 Acacia avenue, will leave the 26th to return to St. Louis to pack up her effects and move to Madison, Wisconsin, where her husband, who is a teacher in the St. Louis schools, has been attending summer sessions, and where he has been offered a desirable position which will enable him to continue the special University course he is pursuing. The St. Louis Board of Education has granted him a year's leave of absence and he is happy over the opportunity. He was born Tuesday, August 13th, 1918, at the Methodist Hospital in Los Angeles. Mrs. Logan has been spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Jackson. Her husband is detained in the east by the very severe illness of his father.

RED CROSS CONTRIBUTION BOX

The novel contribution box for the local Red Cross Chapter, which has the form of a red cross against a white disk, was hung by Scott Whitaker at the foot of the stairs at the entrance of headquarters of the Chapter on Brand boulevard Monday. The first contributor was a bright-eyed little boy in knickerbockers, who watched the proceeding with the greatest interest and when he discovered its purpose, fished out a dime from his trousers' pocket. It is proving such a popular receptacle for stray coins that it is probable duplicates will be made and placed in other parts of the city.

H. S. WEBB SUCCESSFUL HUNTER

H. S. Webb returned last week from a very pleasant outing in company with a party of friends from nearby towns. His vacation took the form of a hunting trip and Mr. Webb is all puffed up with pride since he came home with a four-point buck, the only one the party succeeded in bringing down. In addition to the sport, Mr. Webb says they enjoyed the scenery immensely. They took the ridge route north to Bakersfield and camped twenty-five miles north of Frazer mountain.

To celebrate his success, Mr. Webb entertained his employes with a venison dinner Tuesday evening. The venison was cooked to a turn and was delicious served with all the accompanying viands of a splendid dinner. The guests were Miss Curtis, Mrs. Baxter, Miss McKee and Mrs. Shinner, all of whom thoroughly enjoyed the occasion.

LIVELY BOWLING CONTEST

The bowling contest at the Elks' Club Tuesday evening between the local team and the team of Lodge 99 of Los Angeles, was quite an exciting event which drew 150 to 200 spectators. The Los Angeles players had evidently not expected such stiff competition. Both sides had plenty of rooters and it was a pretty even score though Los Angeles bowlers won by a narrow margin.

Following the contest Joe Fortunato had a surprise in the shape of a nice lunch and dance which kept all the guests happily employed until midnight. The next contest will come off Tuesday evening, August 20th, at the Glendale club house, when local bowlers will play against the San Bernardino team.

The score of the game referred to above was as follows:

CATHOLIC WAR ACTIVITIES

The Glendale Evening News is indebted to Father James O'Neill of the Holy Family Catholic Church for the following transcript of an address on Catholic War Activities, made by Hon. Frank Jenal, Grand Knight of the Los Angeles Knights of Columbus, and delivered at the Knights of Columbus meeting at the parish house on Lomita avenue Monday evening:

Gentlemen: Intermittently and almost like a recurrent pestilence there has swept over this country the vile and insidious calumny of false prophets, charging Catholic Americans with disloyalty and patriotic perverseness. It reaches back through all the years of our national existence, for it was present at our country's birth, when Benedict Arnold, arch-traitor himself, complained of the presence of so many Catholics at the nation's cradle. It filled the liberty-laden air of America with its poisonous vauntings in the days of Know-nothingism and A. P. A.-ism, and despite the fact that gallant and courageous deeds of Catholic Americans in every crisis of the nation's history lent their counteract, yet it has died not, but morbid-like slept in all those foul and filthy places where ignorance and bigotry and prejudice live. Neither the doctrine of the Church, open book to him who would read, based upon the divine admonition of the Saviour of mankind, that love of country, obedience to her laws, service and devotion to her institutions, ahe comprehended in His word, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Ceasar's," nor the golden deeds of Catholic men and women written in indelible words on every page of America's history, in days past, have sufficed to completely and forever purge our people of this foul charge.

One would imagine that such a falsehood so often refuted by word and deed would run its course, but you must remember that there are eyes that will not see, and ears that will not hear. One would think that the Church, so often brought before the bar of human opinion and so often acquitted, would be privileged at last to urge the plea of "res adjudicata" and rest her case, but, you must remember that human memory is short lived, and new generations are fertile fields in which to sow even the vile and base seeds of falsehood and dissension.

So even in our days, intelligent as are most of our people, familiar as they are in the main with the history of America and the loyalty and devotion of our people it recites, which at this time I do not intend to recount, he who, apparently with the enthusiasm of one who has made a new discovery, bestirs and sends forth again this moth-eaten calumny, can still find an audience. In our day, men can still make a livelihood and publications still enjoy the privilege of circulation, whose only stock in trade is a falsehood, a hundred thousand times refuted.

So prior to this great world war we heard, and even yet today we hear, that Catholics are a type of citizens that needs must bear watching, that a great layman's organization of our Church requires of its members an oath so disgusting and so vile that its mere recital should be its best denial, that the Holy Father, because, forsooth, in his Christlike heart there beats something of divine love for all human kind, is aligned with the Kaiser for world power or world ruin.

It is, indeed, a discouraging situation viewed from the purely human standpoint, but when one dispassionately recalls that persecution is to be the lot of the Church and the Church's children to the end of time, we may look upon it as the crucible out of which shall come a still purer gold of devotion and loyalty without even the slightest alloy of selfishness or hatred.

So, gentlemen, in the even tenor of our ways, we have heard the call of country, and pitying ignorance, despising bigotry, loathing prejudice, we are taking our places in this mighty conflict which shall end only when our people, and every people who love right more than might, justice more than expediency, liberty more than tinseled glory shall unfurl before all the world our starry banner of freedom, justice and equality.

What then when the history of this gigantic struggle is written shall it recount as our effort, as our contribution of achievement. It will be a history, gentlemen, well worth preserving, and the one that will bear repeating to generations yet unknown. May I not read of it for you.

More than one million two hundred thousand American boys, braving not only the usual perils of the deep, but the newer and more hellish forms of destruction that crawl like slimy things beneath its surface, have taken their places in that long line which runs from poor bleeding Belgium in the north to terror-stricken Switzerland on the south through the torn heart of France herself, where death stalks about in every form that human mind can conceive and human hand fashion. Of these history will record that considerably more than one fourth were men of your faith, gentlemen. As with these, so with that mighty army of freemen who willingly, aye even joyfully, are laying aside their civil life and assuming the hardships and sufferings of military engagements, many of whom will make the supreme sacrifice, that of life itself, and whose mortal remains will find company with their fellows who already have paid the last debt of nature, and ren wastes of once beautiful France. ren wastes of once beautifu lFrance.

And out on the seven seas, where sails anew defianitly the old flag, out on the broad Atlantic where that gigantic bridge of ships spells ruin to every man who loves inordinately human power, you will read that of the five hundred thousand men who now wear the blue of the navy, and who guide and guard the destinies of free men upon the waters, at least two hundred thousand worship at your altar. This is the record of the contribution of our people to a great active fighting force, and it is, indeed, inspiring and soul satisfying. But what of that great passive army of those who stay at home? Of those what shall history say?

There again with joy and exultation you may peruse the page whereon will be recorded the achievements of men anad women during this most momentous period in the history of the world, a dark time when liberty and freedom, justice and right, were almost beaten into the dust of ages beneath the feet of an onrushing army drunk with the lust of conquest and power. At home, in the councils of the nation, the unerring scribe will write the names of such gigantic doers of things as Schwab, Hurley and Ryan, and you may point out that page to him who would forget as a recital of the fact that when almost overwhelmed in the stupendousness of our national task the country called, these faithful sons of mother church responded because they loved their country with a love born not only of desire but of command. And in this chapter you will read of the patriotic service and devotion of our people, from that national figure, James Cardinal Gibbons, prince of the Church, and occupant of the historic arch-episcopal see of Baltimore, down to the lowliest American who blesses himself with the sign of the cross. From every pulpit in this land, the voice of our bishops and our priests has been raised asking our people to lay aside all old-time race prejudice, to make their Americanism one hundred per cent pure and undefiled, to respond to all government calls and obey all government orders in the management of their material affairs. And in response our people have actively participated in all national movements, such as the Red Cross work, the Liberty Loan and Thrift Stamp campaigns.

But the Catholic war activities all culminate in the war work under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, which our Catholic people are sponsoring, a work of such magnitude, both in concept and result, that the name of this great organization will one day be written high on the scroll whereon are recorded the names of all human agencies which, loving mankind, have devoted themselves to its amelioration. At the very outset of the war, the government, recognizing that a large proportion of its fighting forces would be composed of men of the Catholic faith, called on the order of the Knights of Columbus, as the most available organization to undertake a work of great service in the army and in the navy, and they accepted the commission at the hands of the government as a sacred trust. The work was undertaken and its results will make a chapter of most interesting reading.

Through the generosity of the American people nearly twelve million dollars have been placed at the disposal of this order for its war work, and plans are now under way having as their object the raising of $50,000,000.00 during the ensuing year for the continuance and expansion of this great labor of love. Out of the moneys placed at its disposal, the order has expended more than $3,000,000.00 in this country, and more than $4,500,000.00 overseas in its recreational work among men in service. In every cantonment in America, in many of the lesser military camps, at the navy bases, you may now see that familiar sign, "Knights of Columbus, Everybody Welcome," on a recreational center building under the management of a uniformed and efficient Secretary. Nearly two hundred such buildings have been erected in this country alone, wherein any sailor or soldier, irrespective of race or creed, may find comfort and pleasure and some relaxation from the arduous duties of military life. Nearly a thousand men now wear the uniform of the Knights of Columbus, men who in many instances have undertaken the work at great personal sacrifice. Overseas the same sort of service with which we are familiar in this country is being rendered, and the work is as yet only in its incipiency. And all of this work of the Knights of Columbus is conducted upon the broadest of humanitarian principles, feeling that any man who is worthy of wearing the uniform of American, be he Catholic or non-Catholic, white or black, is deserving of the utmost consideration at the hands of his fellow men. But all this work has as well its religious side, without which, of course, no one would expect a great Catholic agency to engage itself. Many a Catholic boy is being sustained in these dark days by the spiritual administrations of a kindly padre whose presence in camp and on the battlefield has been made possible by the work of the Knights of Columbus.

Every day from non-Catholics and Catholics alike come words of commendation for the great and glorious work performed in this field of human endeavor. Not in any boastful spirit do we recount these achievements. We can do no less, for they are but an answer to the call of country, the repayment of a loving obligation to which we are bound by every instinct of our patriotic beings and every dictate of our religious life. But we do ask, of this generation and future generations that they be weighed on the scales of human justice on our side, when men come, with ignorance in their minds or prjudice in their hearts, and call our people and our faith before the tribunal of human opinion.

MONTAVILLE FLOWERS

THE MAN WHO WILL BE NOMINATED.

The individual voters are for him. The great Republican newspapers are for him. Party leaders are for him. He stands for every principle you advocate and has the courage and ability to fight for them.

This organization has no criticism of other Republican candidates. But only one can be nominated. Flowers is the only possible winner. Every vote cast for another Republican candidate is the same as a vote for a pacifist.

FLOWERS LEADING

As the date of the Primary election draws near, the Congressional situation in the Ninth District seems to be narrowing down to a contest between the present incumbent and Montaville Flowers of Monrovia. Party leaders, who have waited to see which candidates developed the most strength, recognize that newspaper support throughout the district has given Flowers a big lead, besides which he has drawn large audiences wherever he has talked, making thousands of friends in every population center.

B. F. Benton, former Secretary of the Republican Loyalty League, and one of the leaders who recently swung over, claims that he has made a personal canvass of the district and that Montaville Flowers will receive the nomination by an overwhelming vote.
